Test your knowledge

Poet Clement Moore had no idea he had created a classic when he penned "Twas the Night Before Christmas" for his children in 1822.

His work has been the accepted roster for the eight reindeer ever since, except for the later intrusion of a fellow with a shiny red nose.

But can you name all eight reindeer? A quick survey of Valley youngsters and their parents showed the younger the respondent, the less likely the chance of confusing Santa Claus' friends with the Seven Dwarves.

Parents read the story to all their children but, as one 11-year-old said, "little kids know more about that stuff than we do."

Plans for 108 new homes near city's Mission Park

PLEASANTON — Plans for a 108-home development right off Sunol Boulevard between the Pleasanton elementary school and the Mission Park tract have been submitted to the planning department for initial review.

Mission Park Investment Company, which also owns the current Mission Park development, must first complete an environmental impact report on the project before it goes to the planning commission.

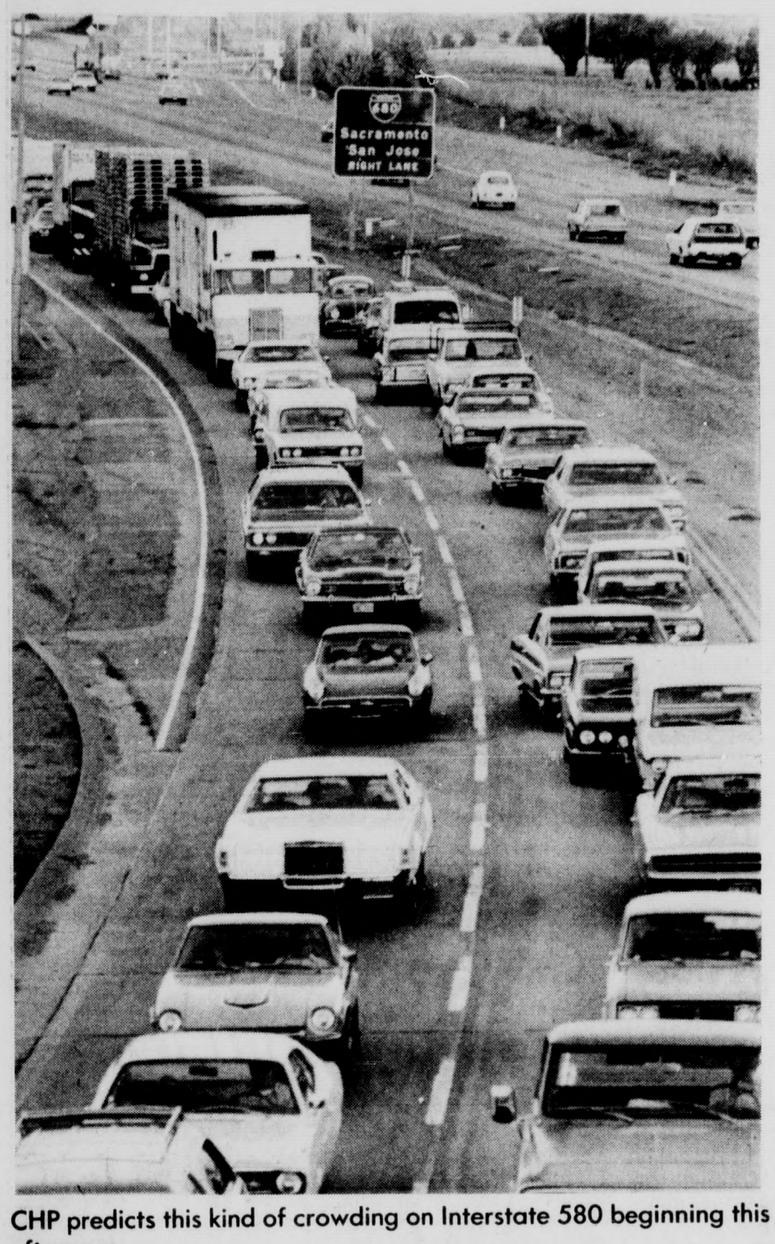
The preliminary maps on file show a circular housing area occupying 32.4 acres, leaving the remaining 16.3 acres as open space. The 108 homes would likely sell at a minimum asking price of $100,000, according to a company representative.

Part of the proposed development is designated as parkland in the general plan, lying adjacent to a section of Mission park. There has been some question as to whether the city actually intends to expand the park toward town. The last time the city enlarged the park it expanded outside city limits in county land. That decision will have to be reached in about three months when the proposed development goes before planning commissioners and city council members for approval or denial.

An EIR is required, particularly because the project raises several questions with city staff. If built, the homes would sit next to the Pico Avenue extension now just in the planning stages. Developers show no plans to build part of that extension, yet gradinp for homes would change the elevationof land affecting the avenue.

In a staff meeting Wednesday, the fire department also expressed concern about the layout of the development, regarding easy access for fast-traveling engines. Water and maintenance of the open space are other concerns. But planning analyst Brian Swift notes that an EIR is required of almost all large developments.

If the project is approved months from now, it will probably also be governed by the residential allocation program currently being hammered out by city council. Council is considering three primary alternatives on how to regulate future residential growth in town.



CHP predicts this kind of crowding on Interstate 580 beginning this afternoon.

Highways jam

More reasons for a safe holiday drive

Not only has the California Highway Patrol beefed-up their forces for the Christmas battle with drinking drivers, but traveling conditions on I-580 and I-680 in the Valley are expected to be crowded and windy.

So, it's all the more important to drive with care for a safe reunion with family and friends.

And, don't forget to fill the gas tank tomorrow. Most gas stations in the Valley will be closed Christmas Day according to the California State Auto Association.

Lt. Jack Healy of the California Highway Patrol said yesterday that the number of patrolmen for this area was stepped up nearly 50 per cent to handle the mad rush for Christmas.

"The later people could leave Friday and still make their destinations the better things will be," Healy said. Interstate 580 commute congestion this evening will slow up those hoping for an early start on their Christmas journeys he said.

Some $1900 was given to the CHP's Hayward station this month for extra patrols with their sights set on the drunk driver.

Although winds are receding over the Altamont Pass, drivers should look out for an occasional gust. Carry chains if you're heading for the mountains. Some roads are already closed.

Impact of AC's strike

LIVERMORE An estimated 4,500 to 5,000 former BART express bus passengers in the Valley are having to find other means of transportation, as AC Transit strike goes into its 33rd day.

Before the strike that number of daily riders brought in abot $31,000 in monthly revenue to BART. A spokesman said the(re is no way to know the long-term effects of the strike on the bus system. BART has a contract with AC Transit for express service to areas earmarked for possible future extension of BART service. The buses provide a long extension of BART for those areas including Livermore, Pleasanton, Dublin and San Ramon.

But BART itself has benefitted some from the strike, the spokesman said. "We've discovered partonage in general has increased 20 to 25 per cent on a daily basis," the spokesman said. There have been some drop in BART riders on the Concord line, partly due to loss of the bus feeder service, the spokesman added. BUt Fremont and Richmond lines have had increases in passengers.

Meanwhile, AC Transit held negotiations yesterday, with no real movement made.

Nearly 1,900 transit workers struck Nov. 21, cutting off service to an estimated 115,000 daily riders in Alameda nad Contra Costa counties. The crucial bargaining issue p is an improved pension plan for employees.

Pipeline bids below estimates

DUBLIN — Local share costs for the planned 22-mile sewage export pipeline will be approximately $3.1 million, it was announced last night.

Bonds will likely be issued in the amount of $4.5 million.

Monthly costs to Valley residents will be lower than estimated earlier, consultants told the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) board of directors. The monthly costs to residents are estimated as follows:

★ Pleasanton residents will pay approximately $1.73 extra on their sewer service bills monthly for 18 months, the period of construction, beginning early next year. The cost will eventually rise to about $2.65 to cover bond interest payments, operation and maintenance costs, and replacement costs.

★ Dublin residents will pay $1.75 for 18 months, with the costs later rising to about $2.50.

★ Livermore residents will pay $3.26 monthly for 12 months, because the money will be collected via the property tax. It will later drop to about $3 a month.

Federal and state government grants will pay for $14.5 million of the project, or 87.5 per cent.

Not included in this total is the cost to buy into the East Bay Dischargers Authority project, which will take Valley effluent and that of other South Bay communities to San Francisco Bay via the $170 million "super-sewer."

The construction costs of the super-sewer is currently being finalized. An apparent low bid for the project's outfall line, estimated by engineeers to cost $34 million, came in at $16 million yesterday. This could drop the overall costs considerably.

Bids for the Valley's sewer pipeline came in at a total of under $12 million, compared to engineers' estimates of $15.8 million. Low bids for the projects will be sent to state officials for verification.

Cowboy type gunman hits Valley Bank

DUBLIN — A tall white male suspect, wearing a cowboy hat and a western fringe bordered coat, robbed the Valley Bank branch, 7660 Amador Valley Blvd., yesterday about 3 p.m.

According to the investigating Alameda County Sheriff's office at Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center, Pleasanton, the man brandished a pistol of unknown caliber, handed a note demanding money to teller Carol Parlin, and escaped on foot with more than $1,000.

Buenas Vidas

The kids will have their day

Christmas is up a long, winding dirt drive. Dim lights can be seen coming from a plain, but large, house engulfed by trees. Rock music wafts softly in the crisp air — sporadically broken by a raised voice here, a punctuation of laughter there.

Christmas always comes to the Buenas Vidas Youth Ranch outside Livermore, some years arriving lean. But this year the holiday at the youth home run by Butch and Ruth Shattuck will be good. Not abundant, but good.

"I expect each kids will get about four presents this year. We always open one Christmas eve and the rest early Christmas morning," says Ruth, sitting at the large wooden dinner table, speaking low to avoid the ears of several teens scattered around the room maybe thinking she'll forget and spill the news about what they are getting.

The Shattucks are licensed to care for six youths; three foster and three "crisis" children, usually referred to them by probation departments or half-way houses. But every year they expect at least ten to show up for the holiday.

"For a lot of the kids, this ends up being the only home they have. Some who'll be here for Christmas used to be in the crisis program. They are in other foster homes how, but they keep coming back here for Christmas." says Ruth, with Butch adding that often kids they once had who are now in the service or working still come back for the holiday.

The last lean Christmas at the ranch was three years ago. Then "the kids pretty much only got what they made for each other." But the ranch is more visible to the community now. Castlewood Country Club this year is giving the ranch food, presents and

Zone water unit to employ own manager

Directors of Zone 7 of the Alameda County Flood Control and Water Conservation District Wednesday night voted to hire a general manager independent of county control and started the recruitment process rolling.

"What we've done is sign a declaration of independence," said Zone 7 Chairman Gib Marguth.

The board had talked for years about hiring a manager who would concentrate solely on Valley concerns. More importantly, the move will allow more autonomy in decisions the board felt could otherwise be interfered with by the county board of supervisors.

A memo of understanding outlining the proposal will sent to supervisors for their consideration.

The new manager's salary and benefits will be paid by the Zone instead of by the county. The staff organization will otherwise remain the same.

A heated exchange between board members took place during discussion of a meeting at which Directors Richard Ryon, Robert Pearson and Marguth talked about the Valley's sewage problems with members of the State Water Resources Control Board.

Director Ed Kinney said he was "appalled" at not being informed of the meeting. He said a delegation of three board members would give the appearance that they were representing the Zone, when in fact they were not.

Pearson replied that he "frankly did not care whether you were appalled or not." He said as a private citizen, he was free to go wherever and say whatever he wanted to.

Following a lengthy discussion, Pearson and Ryon apologized to the board and members agreed to keep each other informed of such travels.

In other action, directors voted 5-1, Marguth dissenting and Joe Concannon absent, to increase the water connection charge $50, from $780 to $830.

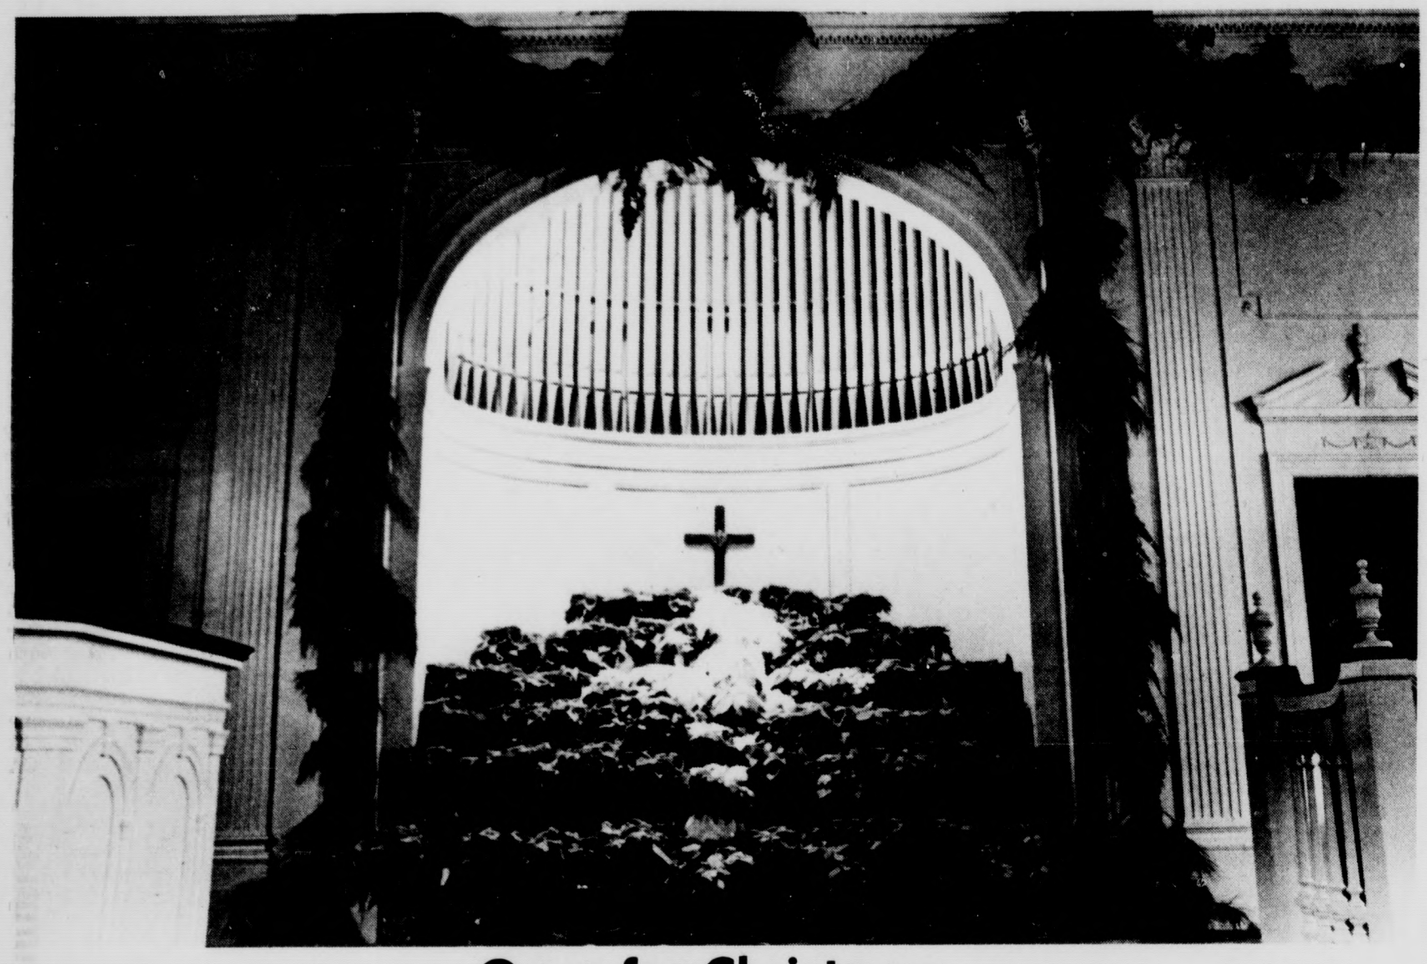
Marguth felt it was unfair to force newer residents to pay higher fees to support projects serving those already residing in the Valley. "Growth is not paying for itself, but subsidizing those who moved here earlier," he said.

Director George Lydiksen said the Zone's only profit was from connection fees because the Zone was selling water at a loss. Kinney said, "You got to get the money from somewhere."

General Manager Mun Mar said the quality of the water kept in underground reservoirs in the Valley was getting better as rainfall continues and supplies runoff into the Delta, from which the Valley gets its water.

Groundwater levels are stabilizing, Mar reported, due to the conservation efforts of Valley residents during the year. About 25 percent less water was consumed this year compared to 1976.

The board tentatively approved an apparent low bid of $884,000 to construct facilities that will double the water treatment capacity of the Del Valle plant, from 9 million gallons per day (mgd) to 18 mgd. Construction will take about one year.



Open for Christmas

The historic sanctuary of the Pleasanton United Presbyterian Community Church at 100 Neal Street, will be open to visitors on Christmas afternoon, to view the Christmas decorations, as it is the last Christmas the congregation will use the church for Christmas services. Construction will begin in January on a new Sanctuary located on Mirador Drive.

Pleasanton collision hurts three

PLEASANTON —Three persons suffered minor injuries in a two-car collision on Denker prive, Pleasanton, about 3:40 p.m. Thursday, according to the investigating Pleasanton police.

Treated and released at Valley Memorial Hospital were Sharon R' Ricker, 31, 4326 Denker Dr.; Brad A. Moore, 20, also a Pleasanton resident, and Randall Lee, 18, of Pleasanton, a passenger in Moore's sports car.

Ricker was backing out of her driveway when struck by the Moore vehicle. Moore was driving west on Denker, west of Dorman Drive.

Lee was treated for facial cuts. Ricker injured her right ankle and Moore was reported to have injured his left knee. Police cited Moore for drunk driving.

Before the jeep was put to use, Clarklift/ Oakland, Inc. donated a free engine overhaul. CAP officials showed their appreciation by presenting a CAP certificate of appreciation to Clarklift/ Oakland, Inc. officials.

CAP officers who made the presentation were CAP Squadron 156 Commander Dennis Matarrese, 1st. Lt. Julie Maier and Capt. Terence Taylor.

Numbers game

Here's a bit of seasonal trivia

Christmas tradition has filled our heads with numbers. The three Wise Men, 30 shopping days until Christmas (now just one), Santa's eight reindeer, "On the twelfth day of Christmas..."

So as the magic day approached young shoppers in the Valley and their parents were asked to explain those numbers. "Who are the eight reindeer?," kids were asked.

Most youngsters, and their parents it turned out, knew at least a couple of names, but few knew them all.

"Rudolph" drew the most response, despite not being a member of the original eight; a tribute to singing cowboy Gene Autry who introduced the character in the 1940's.

After the rednosed one, "Donner" was most frequently mentioned, possibly California families because the name is familiar to heading for Lake Tahoe.

The third name, "Dasher," said 7-year-old Steven Goodman of Dublin, whose mother guaranteed Steven knew no Volkswagen salesmen but admitted he watched lots of television.

"Vixen," said numerous youngsters, all too young to know the movie of the same name.

The other names were less familiar and the parents could offer little solid help.

"Winkin, Blinkin and Nod," suggested one father hopefully.

Others tended to confuse eight reindeer with the Seven Dwarves somehow.

"Snopey (who?), Dopey and Happy," said Bill Gomes, 11, but he quickly added, "little kids know more about that stuff than we do."

For the record, Clement C. Moore first documented the eight in an 1822 poem for his children, "A Visit from St. Nicholas," that became the classic, "Twas the Night Before Christmas."

Moore wrote, "On Dasher. On Dancer. On Prancer and Vixen. On Comet. On Cupid. On Donner and Blitzen."

The eight named, parents were given a tougher question. "Can you name the gifts of the 12 days of Christmas?

"Unfair," the parents protested with one voice.

It is hectic enough with one day of Christmas without worrying about partridges in pear trees.

Elect mayor, group urges

LIVERMORE — A group of about 20 to 25 petitioners will be making the rounds door-to-door in town during the holidays collecting names to put the elected mayor issue on the March 7 ballot.

Timothy Rien, one of the leaders of the drive, said they have collected about 400 names, or 20 per cent of the required 2,500 to get the issue on the ballot. They started on Dec. 12, with only a few workers, and since then their numbers have increased to help the drive.

"As much as we hate to carry it over the holidays, we'll have to be knocking on doors as much as we can in order to meet the Jan. 6 deadline," Rein explained.

He emphasized that there would be no additional cost involved in having an elected mayor. The council would consist of four members instead of five, and the fifth person would be the elected mayor. Any additional cost for a mayor would have to be decided in another ballot issue, he said.

If the elected mayor issue gets on the ballot, he said, voters would be asked whether or not they want an elected mayor. And if so, would they want the mayor to serve for two or four years. Right now the mayor is appointed by council members on a yearly basis, and can serve only two years.

Anyone interested in the elected mayor issue should contact Rien at 447-1222.

Valley obituary

Ruth Bosley

Ruth Lillian Bosley, a life-long resident of Livermore, died yesterday at the age of 65.

She was born at the same family ranch on Laughlin Road where her father, Joseph Laughlin was born. She was a member of the Livermore Rebecca Lodge, Companions of the Forest, the Farm Bureau and the Alameda-Contra Costa counties Cattlemen's Association.

She is survived by her husband, Sterling Bosley of Livermore, and her stepson, Don Bosley of Redondo Beach.

Funeral services are tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Chapel of Callaghan Mortuary, 3833 East Avenue, Livermore. Interment follows in Roselawn Cemetary. Visitation begins at the mortuary at 2 p.m. today until 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.

Good holiday for these kids some cash. The Mafia CB club in Livermore held a can food drive for the home.

News of the ranch has also reached individuals. The turkey is coming from one man who heard about the home through Rotary. And another man, who was raised in a foster home, practically went bezerk when he heard about Buenas Vidas.

"He and his wife went out a bought a bunch of stuff that the kids really need. It was great. He just heard about us and wanted to do something for kids who are in the situation he was," Ruth says, animated suddenly when she tells that story.

A tree over nine feet tall takes up a good fifth of the living room. Some years the tree is donated, but this year the Shattucks paid because, "Well, you got to have a Christmas tree no matter."

The Shattucks began working with troubled kids over 12 years ago with no formal training when their own children started bringing home run-away or confused friends. In the early days the county sought to take away their license unless they dropped caring for "crisis" teens or got formal training. Now they've been asked to train other foster parents.

With three CETA employees and about a dozen volunteers, the couple run their regular home, plus weekend and summer programs for kids who don't know how to handle time on their hands — or parents who can't handle having their kids around 48 consecutive hours. They work, hike, plan ranch projects and simply goof around the 89 acres containing the ranch.

Ruth never really knows how many will come Dec. 25. She just try tries to have an assortment of presents on hand and waits to see who walks in the door Christmas eve. Still, presents are limited and it's often hard to give each individual precisely what he or she wants, especially since ages range from 10 to 16 years.

"Is it better to give kids what you can give them, or just give two kids exactly what they need," Butch asks rhetorically, already knowing his own answer. "We've cut back on kids since we started years ago. We had 20 then; we usually have 10 now. With 20 were really just maintaining. Now we try and keep the maximum and still be able to move kids from one position (in life) to another." A decent Christmas present by itself.

Charity dollar

This is the season when many of us are prompted to support programs and funds directed toward those in need. It is also a time when we might demand a better accounting of how that money is spent.

The "national charities" t to which just one of you is exposed number in the hundreds ... from Christmas Seals to Boys Town, touching Jewish Relief, Catholic Charities, Muscular Dystrophy and March of Dimes. Recent disclosures tell us that not all of these organizations need the money we give them; some spend 50 percent or more of the funds raised in "administrative costs." The explanation for these excesses is usually that "our program has outgrown our ability to monitor the campaign " ... or "we aren't geared to spend the money we have raised.

That was the response from directors of Boys Town, a few years ago, when the local press revealed annual income millions of dollars in excess of Boys Town yearly budget for the few hundred youngsters in their charge. There was no question of funds raised or spent dishonestly; it was simply a matter of not being able to shut down the tremendous fund-raising machine that goes on and on, regardless of actual need.

A similar fault, and an equally candid response, came just recently out of the Pallotine Fathers of Baltimore. That group admitted to raising more than $20 million in a single year, but spending just $500,000 on charitable work. The disclosure prompted the Catholic Bishops of America to impose tough new standards on all charitable groups which function within that church's authority.

These are but small sample of what goes in the multi-billiondollar business of charity. But just one such abuse is enough to sour hundreds of thousands of potential donors on all such appeals.

That is a trend which would serve no one, least of all those in need. It's up to the people who tap us to first give a full accounting of their own stewardship. You might make that suggestion, when next you respond to charity's appeal.

Friendly drink

Al Fischer, in his "Hindsight" column which appeared -Wednesday on this page, accurately points out that there are tough new state laws to discourage bars, businesses and private citizens from pouring that "one last drink for the road."

It should not take a state law to discourage us from exposing our friends or our customers to a tragic accident during this holiday season.

The California Highway Patrol advises us that well over 98,000 persons were killed or injured on California's streets and highways last year because of drinking drivers. That is a terrible price to pay because some one "couldn't hold his liquor."

If you plan a festive gathering this season, then consider some of the common sense suggestions offered by the CHP:

Pour your drinks light and infrequently ... it's the sociability, not the booze, which makes for a good party;

Make certain plenty of food is on hand, and encourage your guests to eat at least as much as they drink;

If a departing guest, or customer, is "under the weather" then . arrange for alternate transportation, or a volunteer driver, before sending that person home.

Do your friends a favor this Christmas — Don't add them to 1977's list of 100,000 drink-related accidents.

School sting

Revelations in this newspaper over the past week dealing with a local school superintendent's pursuit of a vacant southern state school post, come as no surprise to those of you who have followed these professionals over the years.

The freedom which any high-priced administrator reserves to hunt for a job — even while on another community's payroll — is well known. Indeed, when our reporter put the question of Dr. Bruce Newlin's contract with the Pleasanton Elementary School District to the president of that district's i board of trustees, that spokesperson replied in effect: "The superintendent can leave anytime he chooses. We have no way to hold him."

Is that true? Is the contract so carefully drawn between school administrator and school board never binding on the employee? Certainly the district is bound by law to abide by its half of that agreement.

What about those contracts which tie teachers to the local school system? More important, what about the school board's right to remind the teachers they are duty-bound to honor their contract, even during volatile negotiation sessions? Might not those employees recall the school board's laxity in dealing with the outgoing superintendent?

We like the example set by Washington State University when that school's coach sought to walk away from a three-year contract, after just one year on the job. WSU consented to the termination provided the coach first agreed to indemnify the university for disruption of its football program, to the tune of $50,000!

Now that's our idea of a solid contract.

Those utility crews

Rain, cold and high velocity winds have been hammering these parts in recent nights, often bringing down power and telephone lines as a result. But, by the time we arise next morning, it's a good bet those services are working good as new.

These are tough times for those who must keep our basic utility services functioning. We thought a warm Christmas wish to them, from you, in this space, might be appropriate.

FOCUS/Center for shows

'Sunshine' monies

The Valley Performing Arts Company will not open its planned production of "Plaza Suite" in late January. Maybe by June, though, or maybe never.

The problem is two-fold. No available, suitable facilities and the weighty cost of renting public school areas for rehearsals and performances.

We have discussed, through our column on the arts page, the possibility of a small auditorium, such as in the Willows Shopping Center in Concord, being constructed as part of the Stoneridge Shopping Center planned for Pleasanton.

Such an arena could house not only stage productions but other theatrical performances, meetings, and small conventions.

Our early "readings" on such an arena ever being built have gained meagre reaction— from "fat chance" to "it's worth looking in to."

Ann Carroll of the Pleasanton Recreation Department originally advanced the idea when Clay Brown came to the City of Pleasanton as city manager a short while back. We have followed up by noting basically the same idea to Mayor Bob Philcox.

We have learned that Brown will try to discuss the idea with Taubman Company, the major behind the Stoneridge center.

We tend to come at this whole idea of adding-in an auditorium, and payment of fees for a public school little theatre or auditorium, from the vantage point of the little theatre group.

Thus, we feel Taubman is virtually obligated to place a small arena (such as at Willows) in that Stoneridge center. It is self-evident that such a facility would bring thousands more to the center, any of whom would likely make purchases aside from attending the attraction in the theatre.

Flip side of the problem (of putting on theatrical productions or hosting major meetings or conventions) is finding a suitable facility.

While there are numerous halls, auditoriums, "little theatres," and large meeting areas in the Valley, few are ever unscheduled on a given Friday and/or Saturday night.

Suffice it to say the VPAC will not be able to do "Plaza Suite" this January and February. The remaining adequate facility, to our best collective knowledge, for that time period was Livermore High School's auditorium.

But the fee for the use of the auditorium, plus a custodian at $11-plus an hour, is just more than any one fairly-solvent community group can afford.

One tends to wonder "why" such seemingly exorbitant fees must be charged for the use of a public school facility.

If we were cynical, we could almost conclude that some public school districts are trying to find some financial "sunshine" on an otherwise reddish spectrum.

Sex and teens

Editor, The Times:

Thanks so much for the article on Supervisor Raymond's reaction to funding some of Planned Parenthood's programs. While it has been known that the organization is heavily funded on the federal level, it was surprising to learn that it also receives county tax monies.

Recently, I viewed a film produced by Planned Parenthood . . . a typical Planned Parenthood rap session on sex with twelve and thirteen year olds participating.

For parents who wish their children to regard sex as a game or sport with focus on its pleasurable aspects, then this film should satisfy their needs. It is not a film for those children whose parents wish to convey the beauty of human sexuality in a wholesome manner based on self-respect and respect for others. Neither is it a film for those whose instruction would impart moral values and the subsequent responsibilities of sex.

Supervisor Santana has my sincere thanks for voting against funding those who so flagrantly usurp parental influence and values.

If Planned Parenthood . . . concluded it is futile to counsel "sexually active" teenagers in a moral manner than they should . . . be compelled to inform these young people of the serious physical harm involved in the teen sex game.

In the September publication of the California Medical Education and Research Foundation, it is noted that the "increase in cervical cancer is a serious medical problem, particularly among young women who are sexually active." . . . and they are finding that: "the earlier a woman begins to have sexual intercourse, the risk of her developing cervical cancer also the greater number of sexual partners a woman has, the greater the risk."

In the light of this information and the film produced by Planned Parenthood, I, too, question public funding of such an organization. Would it be asking too much for a sex rehabilitation program such as we have for drugs and alcohol, for these sexually active youngsters to regain their self - respect and be free of the physical and psychological harm of their involvements?

Hayakaw's canal

By David Hoffman
Time's Washington Bureau

Conservatives are feeling somewhat betrayed these days by California Sen. S.I. Hayakawa.

The reason: Hayakawa's apparent turnabout on the Panama Canal issue, which is rapidly becoming a national rallying point for the conservative movement.

During the fall campaign, Sen. Hayakawa was widely quoted as saying, "we stole the canal fair and square, we should keep it."

But the freshman Republican announced recently that he now supports the treaties proposed by the Carter Administration "100 percent."

And that has dismayed conservative leaders who were counting on Hayakawa earlier this year to stick with their cause.

"It remains to be seen how well his popularity in California will hold up," says David Boaz of the Young Americans for Freedom. "Hayakawa was one vote we had hoped to get. I don't think we wrote him off until the end."

"It's unfortunate," added Paul Wyrick of the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congrress. "Maybe he views himself as a one-term senator. Voters don't appreciate politicans who get elected by giving them false impressions."

"We got early indications that Hayakawa was going to bolt that he really had a different point of view," says Wyrick. "But for the life of me I haven't been able to ascertain whak it is."

Hayakawa says, by way of explanation, that defeat of the treaties in the Senate would sour U.S. relations with all of Latin America. Thus, the senator says he is supporting the pacts as part of "a fresh approach" to Latin American relations.

And about that remark during the campaign, Hayakawa says it was just a "wisecrack" — "not a considered statement of my position."

"He was just as concerned about Latin American then as he is now," says a spokesman.

Meanwhile, Hayakawa has been courting the California oil and natural gas industry.

Last week, the senator announced the formation of a "unique" group of "citizen" committees to advise him on "major national issues." The first: energy.

"Some legislators rely on a few close friends for advice," Hayakawa said. "This is useful, of course, but the danger is that all the advice might be on the same side of the issue ... I want to involve more than just the experts in the field. I want to have the views of businessmen and conservationists and others,."

Hayakawa released the names of 29 members of his energy advisory committee, including nine oil company executives, seven professors, six corporate energy executives, five utility company executives, and two government officials. The number of "conservationist?" Zero.

What do you give the politician who has everything?

That is a challenge confronting the nation's faithful electorate as we approach this joyous season of giving. To gain a better idea as to just what the faithful are doing about their political gifting this year, I went out in search of that one faithful American who best expresses the feelings of us all.

"I've been giving that problem a great deal of thought," Homer T. Bankrupt advised this reporter. "The last thing I want is to let this Christmas slip by without having given those politicians what they have coming to them."

Did Homer have something special in mind for our beloved governor?

"Well, Jerry Brown is a tough man to zero in on when it comes to a proper gift," Homer noted. "I had thought of giving him a portrait of a ghost slowly sinking in pure - white Sierra Club snow, in tribute to his famed 'Lower Our Expectations' policy, but lately Governor Brown has been raising his expectations mighty high. Mrs. Bankrupt thinks a solid gold crown set into a halo of peanut sized diamonds might be more appropriate right now."

I agreed that sounded like a very handsome gift for our a rising young governor. Now what about a gift for Homer Bankrupt's favorite Congressman?

"Something that would recall all of their accomplishments during this past year would be nice," Homer said. "I'm having my jeweler work on this tie clasp ... a miniature oil well s &a thrust te ay that keeps spewing out tiny Social Security dollars, and the pin thrust through the heart of a taxpayer who has this inscription across his tummy: 'The same to you, buddy!'"

If nothing else, I could see that Homer Bankrupt had been giving a great deal of thought to his political gift list. How about the Carter family? What has the Faithful American got in mind for the lovely little clan from Plains, Georgia?

"Nothing to do with peanuts, I assure you," Homer advised me. "And we're dropping all that 'Born Again' malarkey which was so dominant in last year's gifts to the Carters. What the electorate have in mind this Christmas is a gift that would capture the real Carter image."

Have the Bankrupts been able to come up with just the right idea?

"It's not easy, not when you consider there are a great many Carter images, and the rate at which they keep changing. There's Billy Carter's 'BEER AGAIN' image; his sister (the one who is out to save all porno publishers) now contends that 'GOD IS A HUSTLER', and Rosalynn Carter, who was so big on home and motherhood just two years ago, now has a banner across the White House kitchen master bedroom which proclaims 'E.R.A. BEFORE S.E.X.'

"They say that not even the president knows where he stands with his family anymore. You know of course that Amy Carter has taken up permanent residence in her tree house?"

No, I hadn't heard that, I replied.

"Yeah, and word is she's co-habitating with a blackbird, the class mascot from her public school. It's really got the White House in a dither."

But just where does this leave Homer Bankrupt and other Faithful Americans in the matter of a gift worthy of the nation's first family?

"A nice photograph of Plains, Georgia," Homer replied. "That would be the perfect gift to give to each and every member of the Carter family."

But none of them lives in Plains, anymore, I protested. Billy's on the road pushing beer. His evangelist sister is helping Hustler Magazine convert from hard porn to soft sex. Even Miz Lillian is bouncing around on non-union jets in places like Ireland. Besides, with the changes in Plains in the last two years, none of the Carters would recognize the place anymore!

"That's the whole idea," Homer Bankrupt said. "We send them a picture of the way Plains used to look. Before Washington. Before Billy found beer and his sister uncovered Hustler. Before Amy got public-schooled and even before Rosalynn got liberated."

Homer Bankrupt, typical American, suggesting that if we could put the "plain" back in Plains, Georgia, we might restore America's faith in the White House?

"That's about it," Homer replied. "Can you think of any . other single gift that would do more for the country?"

Freeways

Now we see the truth come alive.

Valley residents gripe about smog. So the state highway department installed the diamond lanes to end the one-person, one-car practice n that 98 per cent of Valley commuters perform.

So far, most of the vocal response has been negative. Ecology is a great idea until the citizen has to make snme personal effort, like getting into a carpool, to put it into effect. The $37 million widening of the freeway had done some positive things. It seems to have made a safer roadway by taking out some bends and dips and installing a better concrete surface. Thanks to the Sierra Club's out-of-court settlement, it was confined in its width to what is needed for the Valley population now. This is to assure that an eight lane freeway won't induce growth here. While it's true that the Valley has a 2 per cent growth restriction, that's just on federally -funded sewer plant expansion. I'm confident that if a developer can find another way to crack the 2 per cent limit, he or she will. No sense in having eight lanes right now to help that. Otherwise, the result could be instant San Fernando Valley.

The nicest thing about the widening has been the diamond lanes. Valley commuters could develop a really positive attitude and start forming carpools. I hope they do. I think diamond lanes are just tokenism, a mere drop in the bucket compared to what should be done. The federal government should outlaw automobiles over the next 20 years. That way: no poisoned air and less social alienation. We could start talking to our neighbors on the bus again. And put auto industry workers into more socially constructive jobs in a higher leisure less hard goods, saner economy. But in view of the opposition to even a small step like diamond lanes, it's obvious that only an earthquake leveling Detroit can wipe out auto production.

The worst aspect of the diamond lane issue has been the performance of State Sen. John Holmdahl, who is leading a crusade to get rid of the diamond lanes. Never accuse Holmdahl of being far- sighted. By golly, the people want the diamond lanes out of the way, so let's get rid of them, says Holmdahl. Never mind about taking leadership on the side of ecology. That's never bothered Holmdahl.

Holmdahl's political allies, the realtors and developers, want eight fast lanes from the Valley to Oakland so it's easier to sell houses at higher prices here. Holmdahl has always been a conservative, real estate-oriented senator. Then he debated Republican Lew Sherman a few years ago at Cal State Hayward, the audience of college students thought that Sherman was the Democrat and Holmdahl the Republican.

Holmdahl scored 21 per cent on committee votes and 33 per cent on floor votes when he was rated by the California League of Conservation Voters. By contrast, Assemblyman Floyd Mori got 10 per cent on committee votes and 70 per cent on floor votes. I think it's signficant that Holmdahl, not Mori, is leading the anti-diamond lanes crusade.

Holmdahl criticized the league's conservation rating of him, claiming that he is indeed a "conservationist and concerned with the environment, but unlike others, I'm not affected by smug selfishness."

I can't imagine a smugger selfishness than commutinq daily to Oakland alone, wasting all that gasoline, creating more smog, and then sitting at the steering wheel and cussing out people in the diamond lane and the Sierra Club while doing it.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm a medical student and have been working in a section of a hospital that treats mostly terminally ill patients. When, and if, I finally become a doctor, I won't be working in this particular area. But for reasons too complicated to explain, I'm assigned to this section. I'm woried becuse it has had a terrible effect on me. I've been living with a man whom I love very much but since I've been working this section I am really a bore. I'm depressed and almost frigid. I just can't force myself to respond in any of the ways I used to take for granted. We can't understand this. How can I ever be a doctor if I'm affected in this way? — S.P.

DEAR S.P.: In your medical profession, or in any emotionally demanding profession, you will eventually have to learn to separate your personal life from the lives of those who need your help. In order to endure, it's essential to find ways to recharge emotionally, to find experiences that are strongly positive to help counteract the pain of life at work.

According to Dr. Christina Maslach, a San Francisco psychologist, people in some professions tend to burn out emotionally. The toll this burnout takes is incalculable. There's no way to measure its attendant ills, such as alcoholism, divorce, mental illness, low productivity and high absenteeism.

Overwork, tension, anxiety and depression are all killers of the sexual urge. The kind of stress that accompanies fatigue and depression tends to act like blinders and produces vision that can focus only on the negative aspects of life.

Admit that you need help, find a counselor, discuss the problem openly and ask for suggestions from professionals in your field. Don't deny or ignore the problem.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My 12-year-old daughter is a little daredeveil and has been in the hospital more times than any other child we know. We don't mind her fearlessness and actually encourage her to take chances. My neighbor says this isn't normal and that to be accident-prone means something's definitely wrong. Is this true? — F.R.

DEAR F.R.: Everyone should learn to take some risks in life, but if your daughter takes so many dares that she ends up with a pattern of physical injury then it would appear to me that you are pressuring her too much. She may feel unloved or feel she has to prove herself in order to gain acceptance or respect.

Often, the child or adult whose only pleasure is in taking risks is really trying to combat a chronic state of boredom and depression. This kind of person is alienated from himself and is afraid of any closeness. This often stems from a great inner insecurity and a fear that no one will accept him for what he is.

Accidents are both self-punishing and a way of gaining attention. Your child should know that it's possible to gain love and respect without going to such extremes.

According to a New York physician, Dr. Manuel Rodstein, the accident-prone person becomes even more susceptible to accidents through boredom, lonesomeness, preoccupations, anxiety, frustration, fear, excitement and mental conflict. Often, a specific worry or anxiety precedes the accident. It is essential to try to find out what your child's anxieties are. To do this, you may need professional help.

Accident-prone people tend to have childless marriages, a high divorce rate, frequent changes in many types of jobs, adventurousness, irresponsibility and aggressiveness. Under stress, they make up their minds quickly and are often at odds with authority.

Q. "HOW DOES CAMERA FILM WORK?"
KRIS MORRIS JACKSON, MI
A. CAMERA FILM IS COATED WITH LIGHT-SENSITIVE CHEMICALS WHICH, WHEN EXPOSED, FORM A NEGATIVE IMAGE OF THE SCENE BEING PHOTOGRAPHED. THE NEGATIVE IS DEVELOPED AND USED TO MAKE THE FINAL PHOTOGRAPH
DEVELOPER

Camera film is a thin sheet of plastic coated with light-sensitive chemicals.

When you snap a picture, the light reflected from the scene forms an image of the scene of the film. The chemicals on the film are changed where light strikes them.

The image on the film remains invisible until the film is developed. At the camera shop, the exposed film is placed in a developer solution which brings out the negative image.

The negative is a "backward" version of the original scene. Light areas are dark, and dark areas are light.

From the negative, a positive print is made by exposing the negative image onto paper coated with light-sensitive chemicals. The photographic paper is then developed in much the same manner as the negative.

The process reverses the light and dark tones of the negative, and the positive print shows the final picture just as you photographed it.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — At one time I had cirrhosis and was hospitalized, treated, and released. I was told if I continued drinking I'd never see 45. I'm 51 now, but I still have some questions.

I like beer (no hard liquor) and I eat pretty well. Is there any medication one can take to prevent deterioration of the liver? Since the liver is a regenerative organ, how long does it take to regain a healthy status? Also, I have heard of successful transplants; is that a possibility?

DEAR READER — You have to understand that cirrhosis really means scarring of the liver. The scars will not go away. The liver does regenerate, but not in a perfectly orderly fashion. The scars and change in the regenerated liver will be with you for the rest of your life. Your liver function has obviously improved, but you can never run the risk of adding additional insults to your vital remaining liver cells.

Alcohol is a toxin to the liver cells. There is about as much alcohol in a can of beer as there is in the average mixed cocktail. I can't approve of your using beer in any amount with your history. I can't recommend that you use any alcoholic beverage for that matter at any time.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is worried about dying before I do. He says bachelors outlive married men because they give up sex all their lives.

He said he didn't want me to tempt him so he can forget sex and live longer.

Is this true that men live longer if they give up sex earlier in life?

DEAR READER — Well, it might seem longer. The facts are that married men as a group live longer than single men, although there are individual exceptions.

Also, people who are active and involved, and that includes a normal sex life, usually live longer than those who are not.

Finally, how does your husband know that bachelors give up sex? Most people find some manner of sexual expression whether they are married, single, or divorced. His basic premise is wrong.

If your husband persists in wanting to avoid sex, even though it will not decrease his life expectancy or affect his health adversely in any way, then he may need to discuss his responses with a professional counselor.

Opening lead: King of clubs.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Terence Reese says that on some hands declarer tries to make his and dummy's trumps separately by a cross ruff. If West leads the king of clubs and continues, South ruffs and can count to 12 tricks if he can make all his and dummy's trumps separately. He prepares for the cross ruff by cashing the ace and king of spades and ace of hearts. After that he can claim since all trumps are high and no one can overruff.

Suppose West opens a trump?

Now a cross ruff won't work. South just doesn't have enough tricks.

He can still make the slam, but a heart finesse is needed as a starter. Then he must plan to ruff his 10, eight and seven of hearts in dummy.

He does this by playing cards in this order: ruff a heart, cash dummy's ace of spades, lead a spade to his king, ruff a heart, ruff a spade, ruff his last low heart, ruff a spade back to his hand, pull trumps and finally concede a club.

'Poke cagers dump Lions

BRENTWOOD — Livermore High School's basketball team found new energy at the beginning of each quarter in downing host Liberty Union, 52-47, in non-league basketball play last night.

Times SPORTS
Dave Weber, Editor

The win was far from a artistic one for the 'Pokes, but nonetheless a satisfying one. It was the biggest margin of victory an East Bay Athletic League team this year over theLions, who have lost to Amador and Granada by thin margins.

The 'Pokes ran off a 12-0 spree spanning the second and third quarters, while putting together an 11-0 spurt at the beginning of the fourth quarter in grinding down the pesky Lions.

They managed to play enough defense inbetween, despite numerous lapses, to maintain safe margins throughout the rest of the contest.

Four Cowboys scored in double figures. Dick Patterson led the pack with 15 points, while Mike May followed with 13 points, the majority of them coming on some smooth drives. Pivotman Brian Schweiger scored 12 points, while Ed Dante bucketed six field goals before leaving the game in the first half following an ankle injury.

Liberty pulled up to within six points at 21-15 early in the second quarter, but couldn't get much closer against a running and gunning Cowboy squad. The 'Poks, leading 31-25 with 2:22 remaining in the second period, scored 12 straight points and found themselves ahead 43-25 three minutes into the third quarter.

Liberty pulled back to within seven points at the end of the quarter at 44-37, but the 'Pokes took advantage of three technical fouls called on Liberty's bench in the opening moments of the fourth quarter and kept the momentum going to build a safe 55-37 advantage midway through the period.

Liberty committed 10 turnovers in the first quarter, helping Livermore to an 18-9 lead at the initial break.

The Cowboys held advantages of 10-2 and 18-5 during the stanza, but let the Lions stay within single digits of their lead by committing a pair of turnovers in the final 20 seconds.

Layins by Barry Schwitters and Tim Thompkins, after both pulled steals, gave Liberty impetus to make a run at the 'Pokes in the second quarter.

Walt West pumped in 11 points, eight of them in the second half, to lead Liberty's shooters. Greg Morse followed with ten points.

Livermore will carry a 4-4 preseason record into tonight's game against Irvington in Fremont, before journeying with EBAL counterpart Granada to the Tracy Tournament next week.

Raiders to face Jones

OAKLAND (AP) — The abilities, both mental and physical, of Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones are likely to play an important role in Saturday's playoff game with Oakland.

Raider linebacker Floyd Rice thinks if the Raiders can get to Jones early, the psychological trauma might rattle the talented, but short-fused signal caller.

"Jones goes to pieces when things aren't going well," said Raider linebacker Floyd Rice. "He's cocky when the Colts are in control, but if he gets down by a couple of touchdowns he sometimes loses his cool."

Rice noted this year's Denver-Baltimore game when Jones seemed to lose his concentration after the Colts fell behind in the second half and threw a costly interception in the final minutes.

On the other hand, Jones rallied Baltimore from a 21-3 deficit to beat New England 30-24 last weekend and net a berth in the playoffs.

Meanwhile, Raider Coach John Madden insists playoff time is "the most exciting time of the year. Each game you play from now on is a Super Bowl in itself."

Tuesday the Raider management gave each player a small silver replica of the Vince Lombardi Super Bowl XI trophy the Raiders won last January. "You see that trophy and you get to thinking about that big check they send you in the mail about two weeks after the Super Bowl," said Raider tight end Warren Bankston.

"Of all the teams in the playoffs, the Raiders have it freshest in their minds what it means to win the Super Bowl, the work it takes and the pride it requires."

Prep action set tonight

Two non-league games are on tap tonight in high school basketball action.

Amador Valley High hosts basketball powerhouse St. Josephs in an 8:00 p.m. contest. St. Josephs was the North Coast Section "AAA" champion last year, and is highly-regarded again this year.

The Dons are 3-3 in pre-league competition.

Livermore travels to Fremont to play Irvington High in another 8:00 p.m. contest.

Dick's passes stop Gophers in HOF tilt

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Larry Dick passed for 211 yards and George Scott scored two touchdowns within a three-minute span of the second quarter Thursday night as Maryland downed Minnesota 17-7 in the inaugural Hall of Fame football classic.

Scott's first touchdown came on a two-yard plunge that capped a 69-yard drive and his other was a one-yarder 2:11 later after Charlie Johnson had recovered a fumble by Gopher quarterback Wendell Avery on the Minnesota 14.

But it was Dick's passing throughout the game that enabled the Terrapins, 8-4, to control the action from midway in the first quarter.

Minnesota, appearing in its first post-season game since the 1962 Rose Bowl, opened the scoring by moving 66 yards on its first possession and getting the touchdown on Marion Barber's one-yard run after only 5:58 had elapsed.

The Golden Gophers, 7-5, threatened again following a 32-yard field goal by Maryland's Mike Sochko, but lost a fumble at the Terps' 8-yard line.

Maryland threatened twice early in the third quarter, failing once at the Minnesota 26 when a fourth - and - one gamble failed and later after reaching the seven when Scott fumbled and Keith Brown recovered for Minnesota on its 16.

Buffalo fires Ringo

BUFFALO Jim Ringo's long suffering as head coach of the Buffalo Bills ended Thursday when owner Ralph Wilson Jr. let him go.

Wilson said that Ringo, whose teams won only three games while losing 20 during the 1977 and part of the 1976 seasons, won't be back as head coach next year.

"We will begin the search for new head coach immediately," Wilson said in a release.

Although Wilson said there are no top candidates, recent rumors put Bills' linebacker coach Jimmy Carr, former San Francisco 49ers Coach Monte Clark, and Coach George Allen of the Washington Redskins in line for the job. "We feel a new approach is necessary to improve our overall football situation," Wilson continued. "At this time a change seems to be in everyone's best interest."

Ringo, 45, was a center for the Green Bay Packers and made the all-pro team eight seasons before quitting as an active player and entering the coaching ranks.

He became offensive line coach for the Bills in 1972 and was credited with developing a front five that was rated among the best in the league. When Lou Saban quit as head coach five games into the 1976 season, Wilson tapped Ringo to succeed him.

Under Ringo, the Bills lost the remaining nine games of 1976 and this year managed to win only three while losing 11.

He wasn't available for comment Thursday.

Hall wants to go pro

PALO ALTO — Army quarterback Leamon Hall thinks Uncle Sam should let him move immediately into pro football rather than requiring him to serve an expected tour of duty.

"It seems to me they'd be shooting themselves in the foot," Hall says of the Army administration should it turn down his proposal.

Instead of spending the next five years drilling troops as an Army officer, Hall wants to spend part of the year drilling receivers in the NFL, working off his military debt at a slower pace.

"Pro players are looked up to by the public like no one else, especially by young people," says Hall. "They couldn't buy the kind of publicity they'd get if I were to make it."

Hall is in town for the East-West Shrine game Dec. 31. He was picked for the squad after completing 151 of 265 passes for 1,944 yards and 15 touchdowns in Army's 7-4 season.

At 6 - foot - 5, Hall is of the size prized by the pro ranks and says his coach, Homer Smith, supports his idea. His presence in the NFL could do wonders for Army recruiting.

"Look what Roger Staubach has done for the Navy," said Hall, noting one of the few men ever to serve the military academies' mandatory five-year obligation and then go into the pros.

Hall is not a newcomer to unusual ideas. He came up with the plan for a blood oath before Army's victory over Navy this year after he was concerned that the West Point team wasn't unified.

The WFL is remembered at playoff time

It would make Santa Claus green with envy.

The Hawaiians of the late, lamented World Football League had just signed Ted Kwalick to a contract with a substantial bonus on top of an even more substantial salary. (A "substantial bonus" is in excess of $150,000 and less than $350,000.)

But Ted was such an all-around good guy, and the owners of the team were so sure that the WFL would survive that they asked Ted, "Hey is there anything else you'd like? A car, maybe?"

Ted, being no fool, said, "Sure, the wife's always wanted a Cadillac," so the owners went down and bought Kwalick's wife a brand new Cadillac as a stocking stuffer.

The car ran better and lasted longer than the World Football League, but you can bet it led a much duller life.

Alamo's George Najarian was intimately involved in the World Football League, almost from the beginning, and wound up as the assistant general manager of director of player personnel for the Hawaiians for the year and a half that the WFL added a comic opera touch to the nation's sports pages.

For those of you with short and/or selective memories, the WFL was dreamed up by Gary Davidson, a Los Angeles hustler, late in 1973. Davidson organized the league and awarded himself a franchise since, after all, he did have the letterheads printed.

And to prove that he was no fool, Davidson immediately sold the franchise at a huge profit and got himself elected president of the league at an impressive salary. After this initial bit of privateering, Davidson fades into the background of the story, but his penchant for easy money and eye for the main chance provide an appropriate backdrop for the whole saga.

"We went a little too fast," recalls Najrian, who now heads up the TWI Corporation, which folds the expansion rights on the West Coast to a sandwich-shop chain. "We should have waited a season before going into a full operation."

"I signed 147 players, but the first big player I signed was Ted Kwalick," recalled Najarian. "I think I signed him in a bar.

"From there I signed Calvin Hill," Najarian went on. Hill received a bonus for $200,000 and Najarian wrote out the check in the lobby of the Royal Hawaiian.

"Early in the league the checks were good, too," added Najarian but that lasted about as long as an Hawaiian snowstorm. But while it lasted, writing $200,000 checks was fun.

"It feels good," said Najarian. "I'd like to write a lot of them."

The Hawaiians were one of the better-financed organizations in the league, and signed big names like John Gilliam, Ed Hargett, Randy Johnson, Ed Flanagan, and John Wilber — well, they were big names in 1974, and they were all due to arrive in 1975 when, it was promised, the WFL would be really something.

Mat Alums led by Lehman's 16

Mark Lehman scored 16 points to lead a team of former Granada High School basketball players to a 69-67 victory over the current Matador varsity squad Wednesday night.

The Alumni jumped out to a 21-9 first quarter lead. They were outscored by the varsity through the final three quarters, but the Mats comeback effort fell short.

The Alumni ran a fast break offense, with the result that the varsity got into early foul trouble. The Alumni capitalized by hitting nine of nine free throws in the first quarter.

Lehman scored the Alums' first eight points, and added another six points in the final period, including a bucket which put the Alumni ahead, 67-66, with 31 seconds left.

The varsity shot poorly most of the game. The Mats began to hit a few outside shots in the second and third quarters, led by Dan Lambert, who had 18 in the two periods.

Lehman, a 1974 graduate, was the Alumni's top scorer with 16. Lambert finished with 20 for the Granada varsity, while teammate Steve Robison had 10.

Host Denver

Warriors toe-deep in talent

OAKLAND — Al Attles hefted a claw hammer some one had left on his desk, feigned a swing at a group of approaching questioners and warned, "I'll hit the first guy."

Then, he laughed and put the makeshift weapon aside. And that, considering the decidedly unfunny things that have happened to Attles and the Golden State Warriors recently, is commendable.

No one could blame Attles for feeling backed into a corner after the Warriors, who host Denver tonight at 8 p.m., had lost a 31-point lead — and barely salvaged the game — against Boston Wednesday night.

It was another of those games during which the Warriors looked as deep as a baby's wading pool, not very.

Rick Barry, who combined with Phil Smith for 74 of the Warriors' 111 points, admitted, "When you're 14-16, you've got some problems."

Attles claims that the lost leads and stretch failings of the Warriors can be traced to the bench, which shot 35 per cent on its way to a collective 16 points Wednesday.

" How many times has it happened?" he asked, "We're going along well, get a chance to give some people rest, make some substitutions and now we can't shoot the ball fast enough."

Clifford Ray played 45 minutes against the Celts, Smith 40 and Barry 39. Golden State's starters may get accustomed to going the distance.

"Maybe we're going to have to let some people play 40 minutes and not let some others play as much." Attles said, then musing, "Then you run into the problem of having people too tired to play, so maybe I'll have to look at my substitutions more closely.

"But," he snapped, "I don't think Phil was in when the 31-point lead vanished and I don't think Rick was in when in vanished."

Attles choice of time and place haven'tsaved the back-up players from the occasional post-gametongue-lashing, which went on for more than a quarter-hour Wednesday.

"I didn't contribute to losing the lead at all," the Warrior coach claimed. "I didn't take a shot, I didn't do anything but make some substituions. All these guys are professional players. They should be able to go in and, at least, do the right thing.

"I can't think they're too happy about what went on," he continued. "When you're up 31 points, you should put the other team out of the ball game. The frustrating thing is that our defense was lax again, that's how they got back in it."

Barry, the titular captain of the Warriors, refused to comment on Attles barbs, saying, "Don't try to get me to comment on what Al said. He's the boss of the team, not me. I'm just happy we won the game."

Smith, who scored 32 to join Barry, who had 42, as the Warriors' lone double-figure scorers, placed less importance than Attles on the lack of depth.

"When anybody gets a lead, it's kind of easy to let up a little bit," said Smith. "And our bench did that. The Celtics are a veteran squad; your have to bear down and maintain pressure on them."

But, the fourth-year pro cautioned, "You have to have confidence in your bench and give them a chance to play. Any club that wants to be a good club has to play its bench."

Or trade for a new one.

The latter is not an easy route to negotiate, says Attles.

Nuggets surround Boston's Dave Bing.

Scott asks for trade

OAKLAND — Veteran guard Charlie Scott of Boston says he hopes the struggling Celtics will trade him.

"Right now, I think it would be better for all concerned," Scott said Wednesday following a 111-106 loss to the Golden State Warriors.

"I'm tired of keeping quiet," he added. "I'm not keeping quiet anymore.They are always talking about changing. Why is it me that always has to change."

Scott hit just two of 14 field goal attempts and suffered five turnovers as the Celtics' record fell to 10-19.

"I'm a man, not a kid, and I expect to be treated like a man," said Scott. "If I can't get that here (Boston), I'd rather go someplace where I can get it."

Scott, averaging 17 points a game this season, played two years in the American Basketball Association, then spent two years with Phoenix before joining Boston in 1975.

Owner Irvin Levin was on hand to watch his team play. His only comment after the game was, "We've had all kind of problems."

Crumbs wins

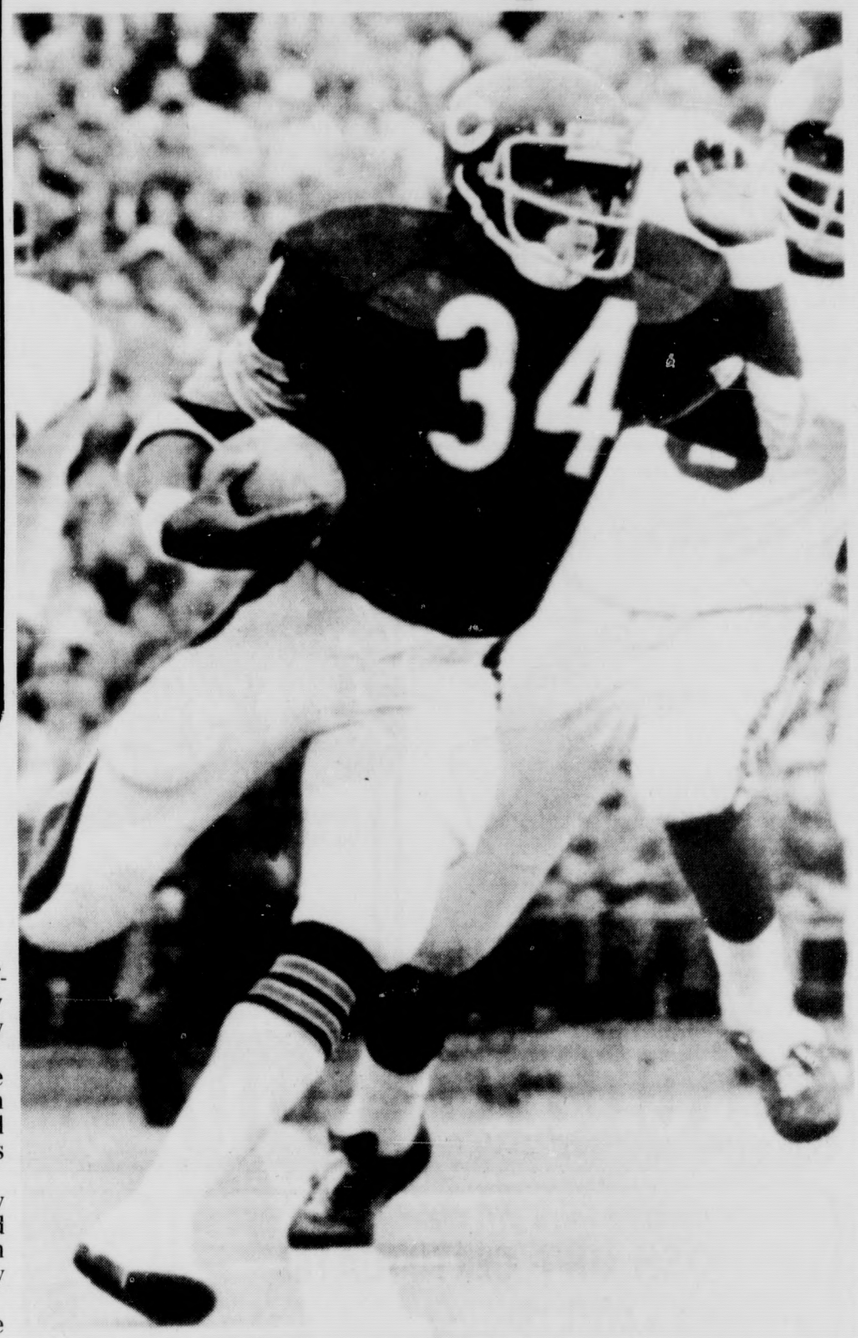
SAN MATEO — Crumbs came from 30 lengths off the pace to splash his way to a two-length victory Friday in the $25,000 Merry Christmas claiming stakes as Bay Meadows ended its fall meeting.

Steve Valdez brought the 5-year-old up on nine rivals in the midstretch to win the 1⅛-mile race going away in 1:54 2-5.

It was the second stakes victory of the year for Crumbs who has been in the money in 12 of his 21 races. He paid $11, $5.20 and $4.

Argentine-bred Persiball was second and paid $20.20 and $8.

Bears hope to stop 'Sack Man'



Walter Payton and the Chicago Bears will have their hands full when they face Dallas Saturday.

DALLAS — To dominate the Dallas Cowboys in Monday's first round National Conference playoff game, the Chicago Bears must handcuff "The Sack Man."

Dallas defensive end Harvey Martin has 23 quarterback sacks for the year which is more than a lot of National Football League teams. Chicago, in fact, has just 26 as a team.

Martin and Randy White, playing his first year at right tackle are an awesome pass rush force side - by - side. Both are strong and quick and that's the side of the Cowboys' line that Bears quarterback Bob Avellini will have to watch.

"It used to be that I'd come down to the final game of the season and get my 10th quarterback trap and I'd feel pretty good about the thing and say that's a big deal," says Martin.

But Martin figured an the offseason he needed to set some goals — like George Andrie's club record of 22 quarterback traps.

"It finally dawned on me that if I go out and play the very best I can every game then the sacks will come naturally," says Martin. "And there's no telling how many traps a guy might get playing next to a player like Randy."

White has kept the opposition from totally double-teaming Martin because of quickness reminding some of former Dallas great Bob Lilly in his prime.

"When I realize this is only Randy's first year at the position and how good he is and how many years he has left to play then I get mighty happy," says Martin.

Martin and White, a former Outland Trophy winner from Maryland, often execute what Dallas defensive coordinator Ernie Stautner calls the "limbos and cha-chas" which are escape moves to confuse the offensive linemen.

Named after dances, White, for example, will loop (limbo) to the outside and Martin will come charging inside (cha-cha) throullenge for me to get in there because I don't get any cheap sacks anymore."

Dallas finished the year with 53 quarterback traps.

The Cowboys' priority list against Chicago includes trying to stop Walter Payton on the ground and force Avellini to the launching pad where Martin and Co. can tee off.

Martin says holding Payton down will be difficult.

"He only got 41 yards against us the last time but a lot of people forget he hurt an ankle," says Martin. "We'll have our hands full with him.

"People talk about the Super Bowl. I don't care who gets in the Super Bowl as long as the Cowboys do. The Super Bowl derby is under way and I just hope we have the right kind of horses."

The Dallas Sack Man will be on his.

Olympic limits urged

LOS ANGELES — A Montreal city councilman has urged strict cost limits for the proposed 1984 Olympic games here to avoid a billion-dollar taxpayers' debt such as his city suffered after hosting the 1976 games.

Nicholas Auf der Maur said Wednesday that Montreal's original budget of $124 million might not have been inflated to $1.5 billion if such controls had been imposed.

He made his comments at a hearing of the City Council's Charter and Administrative Code Committee, which is considering a proposed charter amendment limiting Olympic costs.

Auf der Maur testified that pressure from the International Olympic Committee and from the 21 sports federations representing athletes around the world helped boost the Montreal costs.

The committee, he said, "is composed of old world aristocrats and Japanese princes and Italian counts. Theirs is not the ordinary world in which most Olympic officials live."

He added the federations have insisted on facilities equal in quality to those provided at the last Olympic competition.

For example, Auf der Maur said Montreal had not planned on special archery provisions, but wound up paying $2 million for them.

"What would enhance Los Angeles' posture in bargaining with the IOC and the federations would be to have an institutionalized prohibition on costs, so that no argument would be made in terms of public relations or the city's image," he said.

Auf der Maur added that Olympic hosts often are dragged "into a quagmire of expenditures" that appeal to their desire for prestige. - by Associated Press

Neely calls it quits

DALLAS — Veteran offensive tackle Ralph Neely, who triggered a courtroom war with the Houston Oilers in the struggling years of the American Football League, announced his retirement from the Dallas Cowboys Thursday effective at the end of the playoffs.

Neely, a 13-year veteran, cited physical ailments and his numerous business interests, saying "the time has come for me to quit. At the age of 34, it gets to be more of a physical challenge to play every year.

"I'll be going into business. I'm really retiring this time."

Neely retired in 1971 then came back the next summer camp.

Dallas had to give Houston draft choices and other compensation for Neely in 1965 after a district judge ruled against the Cowboys after a lengthy battle. Neely had signed with both Houston and Dallas when he came out of Oklahoma.

The compensation included four exhibition games in the Astrodome against the Oilers which became known as the "Ralph Neely Bowl."

Neely was a perennial all-pro at right tackle until he was switched to left tackle with the emergence of Rayfield Wright.

"It was one of the great sacrifices in sport," said Cowboys President and General Manager Tex Schramm. "Ralph moved to the left side because we needed it. There's no question that to some extent it hampered his effectiveness. He made a great contribution but he was never quite the same on the left side."

Neely suffered a leg injury in 1971 while riding on a motorbike that caused him to miss the Super Bowl.

"Ralph Neely was and has always been a team man," said Schramm, who said the cost in lawyer's fees and compensation to Houston "was worth every penny of it."

Neely, an All-America in college, was All-Pro four times and made numerous appearances in the Pro Bowl.

Apperson ranch

Still may be a case

Pleasanton rancher Bill Apperson's legal embroglio with the Sierra Club over his proposed Diamond A dude ranch near Sunol could end if his attorney's motion for a Supreme Court dismissal is granted.

Attorney Joseph Joiner has asked Chief Justice Rose Bird to dismiss the suit because Alameda County has changed a zoning ordinance which in effect undercuts one of the points However, cautioned Alameda County Counsel Tom Fennone yesterday, another important point remains and the suit may not be dismissed.

Alameda County recently enacted an ordinance spelling out more specifically the kind of recreational facility permitted in an agricultural district. The Sierra Club contended that the earlier version barred Apperson's plan for 322 guest villas at the ranch because no "residential" uses were permitted.

Now that the ordinance has been modified to allow the villas, the suit is moot, said Joiner, and ought to be dismissed.

Fennone said yesterday that while that all may be true, the Sierra Club raised another point which Joiner has not mentioned, namely, did the county make sufficient findings when it ruled the project did not violate the local health and welfare, won't harm the immediate vicinity, and that the use won't go against the reason for the agricultural district in the first place.

Fennone, who represents the suit's other defendant, Alameda County, thinks the Supreme Court may want to hang on to the Apperson suit to see if the county did make the proper findings.

"It's the first case since 'Topanga' six months ago, which set the precedent about findings in this area and the Supreme Court may want to say, 'This is the way to make the findings,' or it may disagree and give new instructions on how to make the findings," said Fennone.

Sierra Club attorney Owen O'Donnell said yesterday that the county's change in the ordinance is an end run around the law suit. The county has the right to make the ordinance change, but it also should require Apperson to apply anew under the new ordinance. And the Supreme Court should keep the case for a decision.

Apperson's attorney Joiner was not available, but his law partner, Dewey Watson, said that a reapplication to the county would be unnecessary and definitely slow and expensive.

Selvey Realty vs. City of Ventura clearly established that zoning ordinances can change while law suits are in the courts and the new ordinance immediately applies to the original application, said Watson.

Ironically the decision in Selvey Realty benefitted the s'" "no - growthers," said Watson, but in the Apperson case it would hurt them.

Road financing snag

Big price tag for Foothill project

PLEASANTON — With the groundbreaking date for the Stoneridge Regional Center only three or four months away, the city is asking Alameda County to renew an earlier pledge to help finance the necessary widening of Foothill Road.

The widening would involve six lanes near Interstate 580 narrowing to four lanes and then to two lanes in order to route traffic into the huge shopping center.

The county pledged $250,000 for its share of the work in 1974, but that was a two year commitment and the center became stalled over the lack of Valley growth and sewer plant expansion.

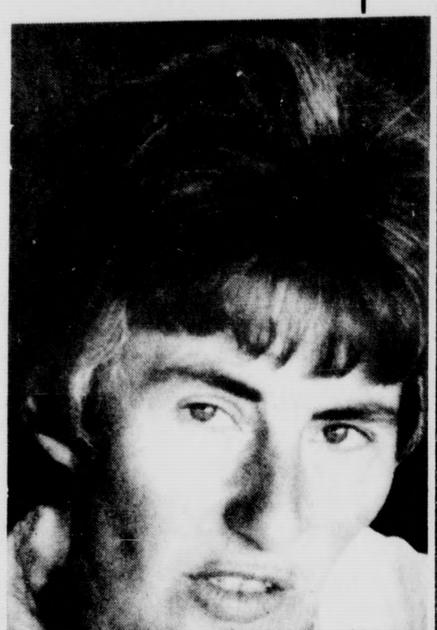
Now the price tag for the county's share has risen from $250,000 to perhaps more than $500,000 because of inflation and a city decision to make the four lane segment of the roadway longer.

Supervisor Valerie Raymond met late Wednesday afternoon with city staff to learn about the costs and objectives of the project.

Raymond told The Times yesterday that the county is in a double bind : not only has inflation raised the cost, but there are fewer funds to tap now. Gas tax revenues have not risen much in the past year or two, but costs of the countY's many road projects have.

It will take a year or two of hunting for gas tax money, but Raymond might be able to persuade other supervisors that the widening will "pay for itself" because of the sales tax revenues to be generated by the shopping center.

However, other supervisors can use the same logic about a much larger project competing for gas tax funds, a road through Hayward and San Leandro designed to give access to valuable industrial parcels.



VALERIE RAYMOND
Double bind

Funds could be taken from other Valley road projects, but Raymond said she would have to weigh the costs and merits of each project and compare them to whatever is finally negotiated on the Foothill Road item.

It's possible, for example, that some funds could be taken from the completion of the Stanley Boulevard widening. Road Chief Jessie Cambra hopes to accumulate enough gas tax revenues in the next three or four years to finish the widening to the Pleasanton city limits.

Innocent plea

OAKLAND (AP) — Joseph Otto Egenberger has pleaded innocent to charges he murdered a coed 14 years ago, even though he surrendered three weeks ago in connection with the crime.

Lindsay set new bail for him at $15,000 and scheduled Jan. 9 for a pre-trial hearing. Engenberger paid the bail.

Easing the hurt of moving

PLEASANTON — It's hard to move into a new communitv or away from a place you've grown to love. Doubly hard during the holidays. But today's society is transitory, with jobs often forcing moves every few years.

Two recreation department workshops, designed especially for frequent movers, will focus on the emotional hardships and trasitions transitions of moving from place to place. Both workshops run for three weeks, each costing $15.

"Making Moving Transitions," on Thursdas beinning Jan. 26 at 9:30 a.m., is for newcomers to town and will be held at Century House.

"Bloom where You Are Planted," the second workshop, begins Jan. 31 at the Val Vista Recreation Center from noon to 3 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Offering the courses is Suzy Weger, who holds a M.S. degree in humanistic studies and has 20 moves behind her. Those interested can call the recreation department at 846-3202 for more information.

Podiatry care offered

PLEASANTON — The Health Care Center beginning Dec. 30 will offer podiatry services to residents of the Valley. Services will be held on the last Friday of each month and will be staffed by a podiatrist assigned to the center by Alameda County.

Clinics will be directed primarily at low income Valley residents, although eligibility will not be restricted. The center is hopeful that low income elderly people with podiatry related problems will take advantage of this new service.

Further information is available by calling the center at 462-1755. The center is located at 4361 Railroad Ave., Suite J, in Pleasanton.

Radio rules

Carl Martin of the Livermore Amateur Radio Klub is scheduled to teach the Livermore Adult School's new course in amateur radio regulations, beginning Monday, Jan. 9. The class is designed to teach basic morse code and electronics theory to enable participants to earn a "Novice class" license. A minimum of morse code is enough for the novice class which can be practiced and improved on to earn a "Technician class" license letting operators use morse and voice. For more information contact the Livermore Adult School or LARK members Martin, 443-2602 or George Overturf, 455-9997.

Pipeline foes think they'll get signatures

PLEASANTON — The CARD Committee announced yesterday that one member alone has collected 1,000 signatures since the 30-member group began gathering signatures Dec. 11 to force the LAVWMA pipeline issue back before voters.

The committee needs 5,000 sionatures to qualify their initiative on the March 7 ballot. Secretary Birdie Bianchi says only member Thurmon Caudill has turned in his petitions to be tabulated — with about 1,000 signatures. Several other persons have indicated the drive is doing well, thus she expects to obtain the needed 5,000 before the month-away deadline arrives.

Bianchi says solicited funds to back the initiative in a court battle if necessary haven't been tabulated, but did say she has picked up $100 and $200 donations. The group believes it will need $10,000 to take the initiative to court if the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency board refuses to allow the initiative on the ballot.

Essentially, the initiative asks that the planned LAVWMA pipeline be approved by voters before it is built. Voters turned down a smaller pipeline a year ago November. But the LAVWMA board then revised its joint powers agreement, giving it the authority to build a waste water export pipe without voter approval.

Rain up, water down

Rainfall has increased over last season but reservoir levels are lower, the state Department of Water Resources reports.

Average rainfall recorded at San Francisco during the rainy season (officially beginning Oct. 1) is 4.6 inches. Only 1.8 inches fell there in the 1976-77 season.

This season up to Dec. 13, 2.5 inches has fallen at the San Francisco station.

Rainfall has significantly increased in Northern California over last year, but is almost nil in the southern end of the state.

Water levels in major reservoirs have fallen despite the heavier rainfall. At Oroville Reservoir, a major supplier of the Valley's water, there is less than 1,000 acre-feet of water.

Last year at the same time, there were approximately 1,600 acre-feet. The 10-year average is about 2,300 acre-feet.

At the beginning of the 1977-78 season, surface water storage in 143 major state reservoirs was less than 8 million acre-feet, compared to a 10-year average of nearly 21 million acre-feet.

In the Central Valley, 78 reservoirs contained about 6 million acre-feet compared to a 10-year average of more than 16 million acre-feet.

SPORTS SEDAN. . .The BMW 320i, designed for the enthusiast who requires spirited performance and room-for-four comfort, receives subtle suspension and brake system refinements for 1978.

BMW's sportier feeling

The BMW 320i, hailed for its performance, handling and overall driving pleasure when it was introduced in late 1976, incorporates refinements to its suspension and braking systems for 1978.

The suspension system of the two-door sports sedan has been modified by stiffening the front springs by ten percent, reducing the size of the front anti-roll bar by one millimeter, deleting the rear anti-sway bar and increasing the damping effect of the shock absorbers.

BMW engineers report that the 1978 modifications create a sportier feel, improved road holding, provide more neutral steering and less feel of body roll.

Front-to-rear braking balance has been improved by switching to solid front disc brakes and new rear brake linnings which operate at lower temperatures. The braking balance, 70 percent front and 30 percent rear, is turned for American driving conditions.

The 320i is powered by BMW's famous two-liter (1900 cc or 121.3 cu. in.), four-cylinder engine. The engine features cross flow heads, hemispheric swirl action combustion chambers, five main bearings and eight counter-balances to produce "the smoothest four-cylinder in our experience," according to Road Test magazine.

The engine, equipped with K-Jetronic fuel injection, delivers 0-60 performance in the 10-second range and will carry the 320i to a test track top speed of 110 mph.

The suspension system is independent on all four wheels with McPherson struts and eccentrically mounted coil springs in front, semi-trailing arms and coil springs in the rear. Combined with a multi-jointed rear axle, the 320i has a minimum amount of unsprung weight on the wheels, allowing them to adapt independently to changing driving conditions. The steering is rack and pinion.

While compact with a wheel base of 100 9 inches and a total length of 177.5 inches, the 320i is a car that was designed by people who enjoy driving," according to Road and Track.

Engineered to serve the needs of the driver, the dashboard features highly legible whte-on-black instruments that are in full view at all times. All auxiliary controls are within easy reach of the driver with column, mounted stalks operating The directionals and windshield wipers/washers. Heater, fresh-air ventilation, optional air-conditioning and radio controls are placed on the right hand portion of the dash, canted 15 degrees toward the driver. Non glare orange light illuminates the controls at night.

A popular option on the BMW 320i is the two-position manual sunroof. Crank the handle one way and the roof slides back in the traditional way. Turn the crank in the opposite direction, and the rear of the roof will lift to provide ventilation.

AMC plans new Gremlin

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — American Motors will introduce in January a sporty new version of the Gremlin designed with the youthful, performance-oriented buyer in mind.

Called the Gremlin GT, it is one of three new passenger car models the company will unveil during the January-March quarter. The other two special new offerings will be in the luxury AMC Concord line.

The Gremlin GT features a full complement of exterior body equipment found in high-performance models, including front and rear fender flares and a front air dam — all in body color and with color-keyed striping — and color-keyed front and rear bumpers.

Door and quarter window frames are blacked out, and the back panel is black with color-keyed striping. In addition, the dual side mirrors and windshield wiper arms are black. The grille also is black, with bright accents.

A black side strip at the belt line carries the Gremlin GT name, and is set off by color-keyed pin striping, Styled wheels and DR 70 x 14 steel-belted radial tires with outline white letters point up the performance appearance.

Soft-feel vinyl bucket seats, a sports steering wheel, and brushed aluminum instrument panel highlight the interior design. Rally instrument and tachometer are standard as are a floor-mounted four-speed transmission and 232 cubic inch six-cylinder engine. A 258 cubic inch six is offered as an option.

A front sway bar and extra quiet insulation also are standard features of the Gremlin GT.

The special model is offered in five body colors: Alpine White, Sunshine Yellow, Sun Orange, Firecracker Red and Powder Blue.

Three new models due next year

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — American Motors will introduce three special passenger car models early next year, including two which are based on the new luxury compact AMC Concord, and one based on the subcompact Gremlin.

Gerald C. Meyers, president of American Motors, said the three special versions of 1978 AMC cars take into account that many buyers of smaller size cars are looling for the same choices they had when large cars provided the outlet for individuality.

"Competition will intensify as more small cars are introduced by the industry, and American Motors is committed to providing the buyer with a wide range of choice as this series of special models will demonstrate," Meyers said.

In addition to the cars, an ultra-luxurious edition of the 1978 Jeep Wagoneer, called the Wagoneer Limited, will be introduced in January.

Meyers said the Wagoneer Limited recognizes the growing demand for luxury and individuality in the four-wheel-drive market.

"People have discovered the versatility and practicality of of the Wagoneer as a family vehicle that is equally at home at the country club or in recreational use, and there is growing demand for added features and more luxurious styling," he said. "The Wagoneer Limited is designed for the most affluent segment of the four-wheel-drive market."

Details of the special models will be released at the time each vehicle is publicly introduced.

Price drop

Ford has reduced the suggested retail price on its two-door Pinto Pony to $2,995. That's an $82 decrease, the company reports. Other Pinto models have also been reduced.

Toyota's practical Corolla

A low priced, high mileage two door sedan highlights Toyota's Corolla line for 1978.

The full size Corolla subcompact, suggest retail price $3,048, achieved 46 miles per gallon on the highway, and 34 in the city in EPA simulated driving tests. It is powered by a 1.2 liter, four cylinger overhead valve hemi-head engine.

The sedan's mileage varies in California where it is powered by a larger 1.6 liter engine to meet stricter emission standards.

Despite the sedan's price, it includes many standard features such as a four-speed manual transmission, power front disc brakes, MacPherson strut front suspension, power boosted flow through ventilation, styled steel wheels, front bucket seats and a transistorized breakerless ignition.

In addition to the two-door sedan, there are nine other Corolla models to choose from, including versatile Liftbacks, Sport Coupes, four-door sedans and four-door wagons.

The Liftback features a convenient split rear seat that folds down completely or one side at a time. Cargo can be loaded easily through the wide-opening rear hatch. New as a convenience feature this year is a standard remote rear hatch lever on all Liftbacks.

Both the standard and the SR-5 Liftback have five-speed overdrive manual transmissions as standard equipment. The standard Liftback has white sidewall steel-belted radial tires and steel wheels. Standard equipment on the SR-5 model includes electric tachomoter, plus AM/FM stereo radio.

The five-speed overdrive manual transmission becomes standard on all Sport Coupe models for 1978.

Safety features in each Corolla include energy absorbing bumpers, collapsible steering column, steel-reinforced doors and brake fluid warning light.

National PTA project

Federal policy eyed

A new National PTA project will provide a forum for parents to voice their opinions about potential federal policies which would directly affect their families.

Recently awarded a one-year contract from the Administration for Children, Youth and Families (HEW), the PTA is working with Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., to develop a comprehensive set of national policies on child and family development which will incorporate the involvement and advice of parents, in addition to experts. Funding for the contract totals $99,463.

Grace Baisinger, National PTA president, explained the reasons for the organization's involvement with the project: "Throughout its history, the PTA has worked to strengthen the home and the institutions that sustain and supplement it. Currently, federal support for delivery of human servies is generally targeted for the functional needs of individuals, rather than families.

"Where they exist, the bulk of federal services intended for families are fragmented; and most federal policies are determined without the involvement and recommendations of the groups affected, namely parents, children, and families. Through this cooperative effort with Cornell University, we plan to develop a framework for policies which will encompass all families, rather than individuals."

In drafting these policies, three sources of knowledge and opinion will be integrated.

Local PTA units across the country will team up with members of a national committee to identify and react to a number of key issues relating to families and children. The committee is composed of experts from such fields as human development, education, sociology and social work, health, policy and planning, economics and law.

The third source is the Seminar in Family Policy at Cornell University, which will include faculty experts in fields closely paralleling those of national committee experts.

With the assistance of the national committee and the family policy seminar, the PTA will develop issue packets for use by local PTAs. Each packet will contain information on a particular issue (e.g., parenting), current policies, and alternatives to those policies. PTA units will discuss the issues, choose and modify alternatives, and report their recommendations to the National PTA.

Coordinating this national activity will be co-directors Georgia White Brandstadter, directing the project from PTA headquarters in Chicago; and Elizabeth Reilenger, based at Cornell. Dr. Irving Lazar, a professor at Cornell, is serving as project consultant.
